1970 Alumni Reunion Photographs 12

News of the Classes 15

The first two covers of this issue show a collection of photography by Rollins Sophomore Dana Shelton. Son of William Roy Shelton, Jr., former professor of English at Rollins and now a nationally-known writer, Dana bought his first camera at the age of twelve.

As a Freshman at Rollins he worked as News Bureau photographer, and this year he has worked as photographer for the Rollins Tomokan and the Sandspur.

Dana plans to be a professional photojournalist or motion picture photographer. He has been interviewed by numerous major newspapers, Life magazine and National Geographic. His favorite subjects include nature, sports, major news events . . . and pretty Rollins co-eds like sophomore Lucy Cook shown on the front cover.

(Dr. Critchfield wrote this article shortly after Reunion in early April. His references to the needs by the end of the year refer to June 30, 1970, the end of our fiscal year. — Editor)

by JACK B. CRITCHFIELD
President of Rollins College

At the conclusion of my remarks at the Annual Meeting of the Rollins Alumni Association on April 4, 1970, a number of Alumni in attendance suggested that I transmit the same thoughts to the Alumni at large. Before attempting to do so, I wish to thank all of you who have indicated your interest and support of Rollins through your financial contributions and your letters of encouragement during my first year as President. Both have been inspiring and greatly appreciated.

I am certain that most Alumni would appreciate reading something other than a plea for continued support, no matter how subtle the plea. However, I believe I would be remiss in my responsibilities if I did not make an effort to better inform you of the financial condition of the College.

In 1799, parents of students at The College of New Jersey (now Princeton) complained that annual expenses of $171.21 were too high. President Samuel Stanhope Smith sent a letter to parents with an explanation of costs as follows:

- $94.50 food
- 4.67 entrance fee
- 36.67 tuition, room rent, and library fee
- 12.00 laundry
- 13.98 wood
- 4.40 servant's wages
- 5.00 candles

President Smith went on to say that some young men aiming too much at ostentation in their appearance, did incur heavy and unnecessary debts for clothing, barbers, and horses. The problem of paying for Higher Education is not a new problem although the amount of the actual cost to be paid by the student (or his parents) has varied considerably through the years.

The operating expense at Rollins College has increased from $4.9 million three years ago to $5.6 million this current year or nearly 15%. During the same time, income from endowment has increased by only 5% and gift income has increased by only 4.2%. The result has been a gradually increasing annual expense over income, which at the beginning of this academic year totaled $680,000 and is now $450,000.

While donations since July 1, 1969, have totaled slightly over $500,000, $211,000 has been for unrestricted purposes. We anticipate an additional $150,000 from combined development programs between now and June 30; but unless we discover a major gift within the next three months, it will be necessary to use $300,000 of reserve funds to balance this year's budget.

After making all possible budget reductions for next year, the operating budget for 1970-71 will be $6,000,000. This will require total gifts (unrestricted) of $500,000 next year to balance the books.

Three years ago, student tuition and fees comprised 49% of the total income to the College. With the increase enacted this past September, tuition and fees total 58% of income.

While every effort was made to defer an additional increase in tuition charges until September 1971, we found no alternative to prevent what would have been a dangerous expense over income of $1,000,000 for 1970-71. Therefore, it was necessary for me to write to the parents of our students a few weeks ago to announce a tuition increase of $390 and to explain as President Smith did in 1799 the reasons. Unlike President Smith, I did not suggest that many of our students are spending too much for barbers.

When the first president of Rollins, the Rev. Dr. E. P. Hooker, took office in 1885, he observed the following:

There were present two freshmen,

the President

eight college preparatory students, three in the normal department, and more than thirty in the training school. There were seven faculty members, who also doubled in administrative roles. A total of ten courses comprised the curriculum and the total year's cost for tuition, room and board was $164. The unfinished loft over White's store served as administration, chapel, library and recitation building. The first library consisted of a well worn Bible and a dictionary; physics and chemistry apparatus, a ruler and a thermometer. The first building constructed on campus was Pinehurst, a cottage for young men, at a total cost of $9,755.73, including furniture.

As Rollins is observed 85 years later, a number of changes have occurred. There are currently 1100 full-time students from forty states and twenty-one foreign countries. They are of good academic quality, almost equally divided from public and private secondary schools. Full-time enrollment will increase slowly over the next few years to a maximum level of 1400. To continue to improve the student body, we must find increased funds for scholarship assistance.

In addition, there are approximately 2,000 part-time students enrolled in undergraduate and graduate programs in the Rollins Central Florida School for Continuing Studies.

The College has a full-time teaching faculty of 75 members, dedicated to teaching and personalized efforts to encourage individual student development. To meet the anticipated enrollment growth, ten to twelve new faculty members must be employed over the next three year period. To accomplish this increase and to attract and retain top quality faculty, increased funds will be needed for improved salaries and endowed professorships.

The Rollins curriculum includes 500-600 courses being offered each academic year in the various disciplines comprising the Humanities, Expressive Arts, Behavioral and Social Sciences, and the Natural Sciences. With an ongoing evaluation of the curriculum, revisions will continue to assure a meaningful and hopefully an exciting learning experience. An interdisciplinary major is being developed in Environmental Studies and the Latin American Area Studies program will continue to be strengthened in upcoming months.

With seventy structures presently located on 65 acres of campus, Rollins enjoys one of the most attractive and functional physical plants to be found anywhere. With the A. G. Bush Science Center, Roy E. Crummer School of Finance and Business Administration, Enyart-Alumni Field House, and the soon to be completed women's residence hall, Rollins students benefit from modern, up-dated facilities. There are older structures, beyond repair, still necessarily in use. They must gradually be replaced and will require new funding. Present plans anticipate three new structures in the future, when major donors can be attracted — a creative and expressive arts center — a communi-

Currently the College maintains 150,000 volumes of library books in the Mills Memorial Library, the Crummer Business Library, and the Bush Science Library. There is need to update the collections annually and to increase the useability of the library services. Again funding is required.

Realizing all of the stated needs and fully aware of the increasing competition from low cost public higher education, I have great confidence in the future of your Alma Mater. It's potential is what attracted me to a most challenging position.

I have confidence in our students, our alumni, our faculty and staff, and in our institutional structure. Rollins College, as I have studied it intensively during the past eight months, impresses me as being concerned with the important objectives of higher education. It has been successful in focusing on important values and in structuring its educational process to develop and preserve those values. I am proud to be a part of the College. I hope with complete dedication and total effort, and with desperately needed financial and moral support — Rollins College will continue to grow in its service to society.

"Most things come a lot faster to them that don't wait," an old philosopher once said. And Chancellor Hugh McKean of Rollins College at Winter Park, Florida, discovered what that meant when he decided "the time has come for us educators to leave our hallowed halls and go to the people."

It was in the mid-1950's. Rollins' urge to become more meaningful to its central Florida community coincided with a need for advanced education by thousands of employees, many of them professional people, staffing Martin Marietta's Orlando division, then in its infancy.

The result produced an outstanding example of industry-academia cooperation for mutual benefit.

For Martin Marietta, the gain has been nearly 400 employees with new degrees earned at Rollins and hundreds of others expanding their educational horizons.

For the college, the plus is a greatly expanded educational institution.

When it began to think about enlarging its community role, Rollins was a small, liberal arts college with an enrollment of 646 undergraduates and a reputation as an educational haven where you could intersperse study with four years of swimming and tennis.

Rollins still produces good tennis players, but it has earned the reputation of a sound, well-rounded academic center. Placid Lake Virginia still reflects the old, original campus charm of hanging moss and Spanish architecture. But remarkable changes of substance have occurred. The picturesque campus now houses 1,104 resident undergraduates, and Rollins enrolls 1,300 more students in evening courses. Many are working at graduate levels in management, business administration, commercial science, physics, and mathematics, and as undergraduates in the humanities and social sciences. Graduate degrees are earned in business, physics, and education.

Historically, the forerunner of what has become the Rollins College Central Florida School for Continuing Studies, and the three graduate schools, was begun in 1951 as "Operation Bootstrap." Shortly after McKean became president, he proposed a program of evening courses for credit, mainly for personnel of the many nearby military installations. No degrees were offered.

Starting with six courses, the program had expanded to 20 courses by 1956 when the vanguard of Martin Marietta personnel arrived. Enrollment at Rollins College began to rise.

The college inaugurated its first graduate program in business (MBA) in 1957. Two years later, graduate physics courses leading to an MS were added, to be followed in 1961 by graduate courses in education (MAT and ME). The degree of Bachelor of General Studies (BGS) was first offered in 1961 and has since been earned by more than 800 part-time students.

Martin Marietta employees represent 28 per cent of the total evening enrollment of more than 1,300 in the undergraduate and three graduate programs at Rollins, including:

- 12 of the 18 graduate physics students
- 105 of the 332 in Business Administration
- 240 of the 932 evening undergraduates.

Left - James C. Staples instructs a class of Martin Marietta employee/students in General Management, one of the many courses offered for a graduate degree in Business Administration.

Above - Dr. John Ross (seated), head of Rollins' Department of Physics, uses an oscilloscope to solve a laboratory problem. Watching is Dr. Harry Bates, a Martin Marietta engineer and Rollins adjunct professor, with two of his physics students, Ben Drexler and Joe Aebischer, who are Martin Marietta employees.

'64 and his MBA in '66 from Rollins, is now teaching in the graduate business program. In addition to Pew, 22 other Martin Marietta employees are teaching at Rollins this term.

Typifying the determination of some employees to further their education are Robert W. Moyer in Business and Henry B. Drexler in Physics.

Moyer is 42, married, and the father of three children. He lives 45 miles across the state at Titusville, Florida, where he is manager of engineering for Martin Marietta's test operations at Cape Kennedy.

Moyer is taking business finance at Rollins and needs three more courses for his Master's degree in Commercial Science. He faces at least another 12 months of his weekly 90-mile round-trip commute from Titusville to Rollins before he completes his studies.

The 36-year-old Drexler is an electronics engineer with a B.S. in physics from North Georgia College. He is working toward a Master of Science Degree in Engineering Physics.

His instructor is 30-year-old Harry E. Bates, an adjunct professor, who earned his Bachelor of Science degree at Auburn, his Master's at Rollins, and his Ph.D. at the University of Florida. He is married, has one child and is in his first year of evening teaching at Rollins. Dr. Bates has been with Martin Marietta for 11 years and is doing nonlinear optics research.

There is no doubt in the Corporation's mind that much good has come from this joining of two leaders in the central Florida community — Martin Marietta in industry and Rollins College in education. Between them they have provided the opportunity for thousands of people to expand their educations.

What does Rollins think of the program?

Dr. Jack Critchfield, who assumed the Rollins presidency last September when McKean became chancellor, feels a college never stands still.

"We think this program moved Rollins forward. As more demands are made on us by business, industry, and just day-to-day living," Critchfield added, "it is up to our colleges and universities to offer the courses and programs which our students — and the people of the community — want and need."

cohen committee curriculum comments

by EDWARD H. COHEN
Assistant Professor of English

Dr. Edward H. Cohen, born in Washington, D. C. earned his B.A. degree at the University of Maryland in 1963, and his M.A. at the University of Iowa in 1964. He received his Ph.D. in English from the University of New Mexico. He taught at Towson State College, Maryland. Dr. Cohen is a member of the Modern Language Association. He and his wife, Donna, have two children.

He has had several articles published, and in 1969 his book, WORKS AND CRITICISMS OF GERARD MANLEY HOPKINS; A COMPREHENSIVE BIBLIOGRAPHY was published by The Catholic University of American Press. Since joining the Rollins faculty in 1967, he has won two faculty research grants and an H. H. Powers Foundation Grant.

"It's an exciting, innovative program," one student agreed, "but even the double-curved lines of an hourglass represent a fixed form."

For over a year now the curriculum committee, chaired by Dr. Erich Blosssey, Associate Professor of Chemistry, has endeavored to "take the pulse" of Rollins' academic program. The committee, which includes twelve faculty members and three students, has attempted to determine from administrators, faculty, and students alike just how well the "New Curriculum" is working. It is known that our seniors are still being accepted by the graduate programs of their choice and are being offered positions in the nation's most prestigious industries and corporations; it is known too that our freshmen, sophomores, and juniors are competing favorably in local, regional, and national scholastic evaluations. But the committee wished to discern how effectively the curriculum innovations of 1966 were working to improve the individual student's learning experience here at Rollins College.

Generally, it was agreed by all that the freshmen foundation courses represent a most satisfactory departure from the tedious list of "introductory" courses required at most colleges and universities. The lecture and small-discussion-group format has enabled professors and students to establish a meaningful rapport in sharing both in the formal presentation of polished papers and in informal, analytical conversations. While the social science and natural science courses have encountered some obstacles because of staffing problems, the eminently successful humanities foundation course has served as a brilliant example of the feasibility of pursuing interdisciplinary objectives in the liberal arts program.

In addition, most departments of the college felt that the programs which they have developed for their majors satisfy the requirements of the graduate schools and the desires even of those students who cannot resist the temptation to "specialize". Our English department, for example, was lauded last year when the results of a national survey indicated that Rollins is one of the few schools which has retained a sensible balance between traditional requirements and electives in literature. In other cases, where more sweeping changes were called for, the judgment of the innovators has also been proven wise: the behavioral science program — criticized by some students, in 1966, when psychology, anthropology, and sociology were merged into a single major — has not lost its following, but rather has gained support, so that today a large proportion of our undergraduates are seeking degrees in these areas.

Accordingly, the curriculum committee agreed that the objectives of the "New Curriculum" instituted in 1966 were both beneficial and feasible. Instead of attempting to overhaul the entire program, then we determined to consider the problems which have arisen with a view toward ironing out the "wrinkles." The initial assumption was that students needed desperately to be allowed to take more courses so that they might fulfill the requirements of the areas of the major interest, develop interdisciplinary knowledge in the true spirit of a liberal arts program, and still have the freedom to "shop around," or elect courses in a variety of areas. (In the past three years, it may be recalled, the normal course load for each student has been three courses in the fall and spring terms and one course in the back to back winter terms; generally, then a student graduated with a minimum of 32 courses).

Analyzing the results of reports from individual offices on campus and of a study of 20 small private colleges selected for their accepted excellence in the liberal arts — including Amherst, Kenyon, Reed, Swarthmore, and Williams — the committee isolated three principal areas of curriculum which have proven to be most troublesome: academic calendar, course credit, curriculum flexibility.

Academic calendar: it was agreed that one of the most meaningful aspects of the 1966 curriculum change was the addition of the intensified winter term program. Indeed, Rollins College was a pioneer in this innovation which has suddenly been adopted by a rapidly increasing number of small colleges across the country. The experience of many faculty and students indicated, however, that few directed or independent studies could be developed satisfactorily in the four weeks scheduled; in addition, it was felt that the two winter terms placed too much emphasis upon "unique" studies at the expense of the solid "meat and potatoes" courses offered during the fall and spring. The Committee recommended, therefore, that the best of both possible worlds be allowed to prevail; fall and spring terms were strengthened by expansion to fourteen weeks; the winter term was strengthened by the creation of a single study period of five weeks. Under this plan the fall and spring course may conform more readily to the offerings of the "semester" schools, and the winter term can be used more effectively for overseas study programs and for the development of on-campus research projects.

Course credit: in the recent past, all fall and spring term courses have been meeting four or five days a week and have been "worth" six credits. But some of these courses, unfortunately, have not been altered sufficiently to warrant the six credits assigned; and because they were given over a period of only twelve weeks, they have not been easily adapted to fit textbooks which are designed for semester-length courses. The curriculum committee decided, therefore, to recommend the abolishment of the credit system in favor of an innovative "course" system; a student is required to complete thirty-six courses for graduation; normally, he will take four courses in the fall and spring terms and one project during the single winter term.

Curriculum flexibility: because many students were encountering difficulties in satisfying the requirement that each graduate complete equal numbers of courses in foundation programs (including freshman and senior interdisciplinary courses and foreign languages), majors, and major-related electives, the committee recommended certain proposals designed to guarantee flexibility in selection and scheduling of courses. It was decided that all classes will meet for fifty minutes, four days a week. Each department was asked to limit its major requirements to a norm of twelve courses. The language department agreed to offer its service program in French, Spanish, German, and Russian in three-course sequences (rather than four). And the elective program was defined as "unrestrictive." Furthermore, to enhance each student's opportunity to take exploratory courses in fields outside his major and even outside his general area of study, a limited pass-fail grading system was initiated, so that any student may exercise his option to elect a maximum of four unrequired courses on a pass-fail basis.

A cartoon which appeared recently outside a faculty member's office portrayed a once-buxom lass lamenting: "I used to have an hour-glass figure . . . but the sand shifted." In a sense, this seems to represent the current status of Rollins' own curricular figure; but the committee sees no cause for lament. Indeed, most of us here on campus are ever mindful of the need for constant revaluation and of the positive advantages of deliberate and progressive change.

CHANCELLOR HONORED BY TRUSTEES

Honoring Hugh F. McKean for his years of service to the college since 1951, the trustees cited his many accomplishments during those years and concluded with a resolution which reads in part: "BE IT HEREBY RESOLVED that we the Trustees of Rollins College upon the occasion of the elevation of this distinguished officer, Hugh Ferguson McKean, from the Presidency to the Chancellorship of the College on September 1, 1969, do hereby record our wholehearted approval and deep appreciation for his excellent services to Rollins College, which services go far beyond the call of duty and far exceed those services which can be measured in dollars and cents, because among his contributions through almost twenty years of unselfish effort, he brought forthrightness and integrity to the administration; higher academic standards to the faculty and student body; a sense of loyalty and genuine interest in cultural and education accomplishment and scholastic aspiration to the students; and inspiration to the trustees and all concerned."

FOUNDERS WEEK

Highlights of the Founders Week activities in February included guest speakers Warren C. Hume '39, Senior Vice President of IBM and U. S. Senate Minority Whip Robert P. Griffin. Hume's talk covered the so-called "generation gap," which in his opinion, is more apparent than real; the technological changes that have created generational conflict; and how this creative conflict could bring about efforts to make this planet into a more healthy and peaceful environment for all. The topic of Senator Griffin's speech was the timely "Environmental Problems."

MISTEROGERS NAMED OUTSTANDING ALUMNUS

Fred McFeely Rogers, class of 1951, was selected by an anonymous committee to be the recipient of the "Outstanding Alumnus of the Year 1970" award, "for his contributions to the education and communications media by creating the excitement of learning among the children of Misterogers Neighborhood."

Harland Cleveland Hon. '56, was inaugurated as President of the University of Hawaii recently. Ambassador Cleveland is the son of the late Dean of Women, Mrs. Stanley Cleveland, and father of Zoe Cleveland '64.

PELICAN BEACH HOUSE SOLD

President Critchfield has announced that the Pelican Beach House at New Smyrna Beach, Florida, has been sold by action of the officers of the college and approval of the Board of Trustees. The beach house, familiar to many Alumni, has been in need of a great deal of renovation, and it was felt that the costs of maintaining the building were not justified. The proceeds from the sale of the property will be used to meet current operating costs of the College and proposed capital improvements on the campus.

EARTH DAY AT ROLLINS

Four experts keynoted panels devoted to environmental problems when Rollins College sponsored a two-day Earth Day seminar, as a part of the National Environmental Day, proclaimed to call the nation's attention to the dangers of continued exploitation of and disregard for our natural resources. The panel programs took place April 21-22, with Tuesday's panel summarized by Ben Aycrigg '49 and Wednesday's by President Critchfield. Each panel consisted of an outstanding corporate figure; interested qualified laymen; one or two Rollins College faculty members; and a Rollins student whose interest and background related to the specific panel.

MAYOR COMMENDS ROLLINS

Mayor Dan Hunter of Winter Park, commended Rollins College Students and Dr. David Richard of the Biology Department for a survey made by them last year. They charted the depths and bottoms of Lakes Virginia, Maitland and Osceola, the first time it had been done in the City's history. Hunter stated that this was data that has been much needed in the past and will be extremely helpful in the future.

LAYNG NAMED DANFORTH FELLOW

Anthony T. Layng '58, Assistant Professor of Anthropology at Rollins College has received a coveted Danforth Foundation Post-Graduate Black Studies Fellowship for 1970-71. He is one of 25 Fellows named by the Danforth Foundation for this second year of Black Studies. Professor Layng authored the article "Black Students at Rollins" in the February issue of the ALUMNI RECORD.

DR. STONE ELECTED PROFESSOR EMERITUS

Chancellor Hugh F. McKean, Chairman of the Rollins College Board of Trustees, announced recently the election of Dr. Wendell C. Stone as Professor Emeritus. During his 37 years with Rollins, Dr. Stone has served as associate professor, professor, Dean of the Faculty, and, from 1943 to 1952, as Dean of the College, in addition to continuing with his Philosophy courses.

Mrs. Earnest B. Gaylor (EMMA DREYER '02), the oldest living Rollins alumna and author of "Life in Florida Since 1886," held an autograph party at the Alumni House in December. Her book, which has just been published by Hurricane House, details pioneer life in Florida. It is her eye witness account of her experiences from the time she arrived at the west coast village of Thonotassas as a child of 6 in 1886. She includes remembrances of life in Tampa and at Rollins Academy and College. Anyone wishing to obtain a copy of this book may do so by writing the College Book Store at Rollins College, enclosing a check for $5.95, plus 50¢ for state tax and handling charges.

MRS. THOMAS ROYAL (GERTRUDE HALL) spent the Christmas holidays with her daughter, Ann, and family in Loudonville, N. Y., and encountered the worst blizzard since 1888. She stayed on for two more weeks with the grandchildren while the parents visited in Switzerland.

1930

Those of you who did not attend the 40th Anniversary celebration sure did miss a good time! We appreciated hearing from some who could not come.

BARBARA GRAHAM got her family thru the flu and then had it herself, so had to stay at home.

LUKE MOSELY said he was coming, but did not make it. Guess his insurance business kept him, or maybe one of his eight grandchildren; or maybe his 92-year-old grandmother. His son is in the ministry, as are the husbands of his two daughters.

A trip to Europe this spring kept FLORA FUREN CAR-MICHAEL away from Rollins. Helping to train good teachers prevented RUTH ELLSWORTH from leaving Detroit.

SARAH HUEY LEWIS has been working in the Southern History and Literature Department of the Birmingham Public Library since selling her furniture business. Both her sons are now married and she is in the doting grandmother class with one granddaughter.

Real estate business has claimed MARGARET BROWN WOORE, along with her grandchildren.

MAZZIE WILSON was in Russia last summer, participating in a language seminar. And she was in California at the time of the Reunion, attending the meeting of the National Association of Women Deans and Counselors. She does get around!

We kept a lookout for CLEMENTINE HALL KASTENDIECK and BOB BONEY — but we missed them.

VERNA MAXON BALLENTINE has just taken over as the Acting Personnel Director in addition to her duties as Coordinator of Children's Services of the Oakland Public Library. She and her husband were in Florida to see the launching of Apollo 11, and they are spending weekends at their mountain ranch building a retirement home.

LOUISE HILL MOORE planned to be here for the Reunion but lost her mother just at that time. We are sorry and extend our sympathy to her and family.

DOT DAVIS MORGAN also lost her mother just prior to our celebration, and to her we send our sympathy, too.

Re-reading an earlier letter from CLEMENTINE HALL KASTENDIECK, we realize she was just dreaming of having time to return to Rollins! She is vice president of the Auxiliary of the Brooklyn Botanic Garden, Chairman of the Board of the Brooklyn Music School, program chairman of the Heights Garden Club, active in the Brooklyn Kindergarten Society and the Academy of Music, and concerned with the care of two very elderly relatives. Her children are away from home: one son a Navy Ensign, the other in VISTA; and the daughter is struggling to get a place in the masculine-oriented world of theater as a director. Her husband still writes a music column for the Christian Science Monitor, as well as being head of the English Dept. at Poly.

The following is an excerpt of an introduction given HARRISON COBB at a mining convention: "Today he supplies fieldstone which grace commercial and residential buildings from Grand Junction to Topeka. He prospects for, and supplies more than one hundred fifty varieties of meteorological specimen materials, which find their way into collections, schools and laboratories throughout the land." Sounds like he too is busy.

Another busy class member is BUDDY EBSEN. He spends about six months a year on his TV series, and the rest of the time sailing, writing and building a dune buggy with his ten-year-old son. Last summer he won the Isle of Wight boat race, including 450 boats, one belonging to Prince Phillip. He is also in the boat building business, the Polynesian Concept Inc., one boat by that name was a catamaran, with two hulls and 37 feet long.

ASA JENNINGS still travels to the Near East quite frequently — he is involved in the oil pipeline being extended from the oil fields to the Russian border.

MARY CHASE MORRISON has lived in the Philadelphia area ever since her marriage in 1933. Her two sons are both lawyers and have provided her with five grandchildren. Her daughter is teaching music in Boston. Mary has kept busy on the outside in leading Gospel Study groups in her church and at a Quaker adult center for study and contemplation. She has been contributing editor for ten years of The Episcopalian, and has had a book published, "Jesus, Man and Master."

JOHN ARMSTRONG sent no news of himself, but did send warmest greetings to all.

Our foreign contingent has not been silent either. BO-HUSLAV GLOS is now retired altho gives lectures at the University of Prague, and is with the School of Business Administration. He is giving lectures on economic planning to students from Africa, Asia and South America — in English. His wife is also a retired teacher and is devoting her time to painting, mostly landscapes, which have a good market.

GOTTFRIED DINZL has been appointed head of department with the Ministry of Commerce in Austria — he is an expert on the textile industry. He turned down an opportunity to go to Uganda last summer because he felt it more important to tutor his 15-year-old son for the final examinations. The winter blizzards and tremendous snowfall in Vienna turned GOTTFRIED's thoughts to his year at Rollins in sunny Florida!

PETER BERGER is still teaching English in high school. One daughter is in Geneva, one in Berlin, and the other training in a hospital.

Congratulations and best wishes go to CHET IHRIG and GLADYS MORTON on their recent marriage. We were counting on CHET to make the presentation to HUGH MCKEAN, but he didn't show. Maybe he will be here next time — we hope!
